Unfolded Hands.

By John Barton Oxford.

OLD David Griscom awoke from his after-dinner nap on the front porch with an uneasy feeling, which amounted almost to guilt. He straightened himself in his rocking-chair—which his son had insisted on bringing out for him—and glared about defiantly, as if he were denying an imputation that he had been dozing at midday.

In his semi-somnolent condition his first busy idea that it was Sunday; but the sound of his daughter-in-law's voice rising in secular crescendo as she washed the dinner-dishes in the back kitchen, and the shouts of the men leading the teams in the hay-field, brought to him the realization that, despite his idleness here on the front porch, it was a week-day after all.

Old David grunted. On the impulse of the moment he half rose from the chair; then he settled back in it with all the air of a man who bows to the inevitable.

Beside him, on the floor of the porch lay the morning paper, where it had fallen from his hands. Griscom picked it up, not his spectacles on the bridge of his nose, and read for a time. Now and then he hitched about in the chair; and the longer he read, the more discontent became these restless squintings. At length he tossed the paper from him and pushed the spectacles up to his forehead.

Within a minute in the papers these spectacles were told himself disgustedly. "What if they gets worse every year?"

He got up a while looking thoughtfully at the July sky. The smell of the new-made hay came fragrant from the meadows.

"Best hay'n weather," he mused, "but always we gets more or less rain in hay'n time, but there ain't a drop of rain for more'n a week. I'll bet the lower lot's makin' well."

His keen old ears caught the sound of a creaking hay-rack, as it went rattling into the big barn. A wistful light came into the gray eyes; but he stolidly kept his solitary state in the rocking-chair.

Momentarily the smell of the hay got a more compelling; the busy clatter in the barn beckoned him more forcefully; his own idleness wore upon him with more pressing heaviness. When at length he could stand it no longer, he deserted his chair and strolled leisurely around the house in the direction of the barn.

His son, a sturdy young farmer of thirty-five, was pitching great forkfuls to the man on the mow. He paused to smile pleasantly at the old man, as the latter came up to the rack.

"Hay enough this year, father?" he said, leaning on his fork and mopping his brow.

"You want to get it in before it rains, Sam," old David admonished. "The weather ain't goin' to hold on like this forever."

"We'll have the last of it to-night," the son replied.

"I guess I'll go down with you, next load," said David, "an' rake scatterin'."

"No, you won't!" the younger man laughingly vetoed. "I told you when I come home an' took the farm this summer that you was goin' to be a gentleman of leisure, an' that's just what you're goin' to be. I'm the one that's goin' to do the work now."

He began tossing up the hay to the mow again, and old David sat down on a near-by grain-chest to watch the proceedings in stony silence.

"I s'pose I might go over an' hill up a little of that corn across the road, he hazarded at length. "I noticed this mornin' it was plenty high enough to begin hillin'."

"There ain't no hurry about that," said the other from the top of the load.

Old David's face lengthened. "Well, I might begin paris-greenin' them potatoes," he suggested as a forlorn hope.

"There, there," said the son, a bit impatiently, "I wish you wouldn't fret yourself about these things! All I want you to do is just to leave them to me."

The old man shuffled out the barn and sought the front porch again. He sank into the rocker, and for a time creaked monotonously to and fro. At length he brought one horny fist down on the arm of the chair with a resounding wack.

"Talk about takin' things easy!" he exploded disgustedly. "It's about the hardest work I ever done, an' I ain't a goin' to stan' it!"

With a light of determination in his eyes, he got stiffly out of the chair and stalked into the house. When he came out, a few minutes later, he wore his old working-clothes. With many covert glances in the direction of the barn, he made his way to the field across the road. Beside the bean-patch lay a pile of newly cut poles. David threw off his coat, and set to work, trimming the poles and planting them upright, one in each hill.

So engrossed was he in his occupation that he failed to note the rapid lengthening of the shadows eastward and the approach of supper-time. A bell jangled lustily from the back door, but old David, absorbed in his work, did not hear it. Indeed, it was not until heavy foot-steps sounded behind him, and he turned to find his son close upon him, that he realized the lateness of the hour.

"Thought I better be settin' these poles," he observed with something of apology in his tones.

"Father, we might just as well have an understandin' in this matter first as last," his son said with finality. "If I am goin' to run this place, I want to do it. I gave up my own place an' come here so you could have things easy, an' you keep right on, just as if I wa'n't capable, or as if you wa'n't satisfied."

Old David's face twitched uncertainly for a moment. There was something amounting almost to appeal in the glance he gave his son; but the latter's mouth was set in hard lines. The old man picked up his coat.

"I don't want you to think I'm findin' fault with you, Sam, or that I ain't satisfied," he said hastily. "I promise you I won't raise a finger again."

His son turned back toward the house, and old David silently followed him, a queer half-hurt, half angry expression on his face.

Directly after the early breakfast the next morning, David came shuffling into the kitchen, where his daughter-in-law was shelling peas.

"I wish you'd put me up a lunch, Clara," said he. "I'm goin' off to-day an' I don't believe I shall be back to dinner."

"You jest tell me what you want," was the cheerful response, "an' I'll put it up for you right away."

"Oh, some sandwiches an' eggs an' pie an' a bottle of cold coffee," he specified.

"Where you goin', father?" she asked, as she made her way into the pantry.

The old man grinned sheepishly. "I was callin' in to do a little fishin'," he announced.

"Well, I don't doubt it'll do you good," she agreed heartily. "But you want to be careful not to go too far an' get all tuckered out."

"There ain't no danger of that," said David drily.

He delayed only until the lunch was ready; then, picking up the well-filled dinner-pail, he went out of the house and tramped sturdily down the road through the hot July sunshine.

Supper was nearly over when old David came back that evening. He sank into his place at the table, plainly tired out, but there was a sparkle in his eyes, and his whole bearing was one of supreme contentment.

"Clara tells me you've been fishin' to-day," said the son. "How'd they bite? Get any?"

"Nary a one," David chuckled, evidently not the least downcast by his ill luck.

"Where'd you go?" his son went on.

"Over to Dew's brook," said the old man, as he helped himself liberally to the fried potatoes. "I guess there's fish in there, all right. I'm goin' up again to-morrow an' every day now for a spell till I git some."

"That's right, you go ahead an' enjoy yourself; only look out that you don't get too tired."

David indulged in a quiet smile. "I guess I ain't no tender plant, if I be over seventy," he announced.

Every morning for a week the old man took his dinner-pail and departed immediately after breakfast. Each evening he returned, tired, happy, but invariably fishless. His son's chaff about his continual lack of success the old man bore good-naturedly.

"O, I'll get some yet," he declared.

"A feller that goes fishin' has got to take his patience along with him. I guess the fish don't matter so much, so long as I'm enjoyin' myself."

But, one day, when old David had departed on his usual fishing-trip, the younger Griscom, coming in from the field to dinner, found his wife weeping brokenly by the kitchen window.

"Good land, Clara, what's the matter?" he asked in alarm.

"I never had such a talkin' to in all my life!" his wife sobbed from the depths of her apron. "Mis' Gannett run in a few minutes ago, an' she set here an' raked us over somethin' awful. She said she thought 'twas pretty doin' for us to come here an' take this farm an' then send father out to work. She said everybody in town was talkin' about it!"

Send father out to work? gasped her amazed husband.

Young Mrs. Griscom nodded miserably. "Your father ain't been fishin' at all," she explained. "He's been over to Parker's every day for the past week, helpin' 'em hay—workin' for a dollar a day."

For a moment her husband stared at her in dumb incredulity. Then, slowly a great enlightenment came to his bewildered mind. Without a word he turned on his heel and went out by the back door.

He hurried down the road to the Parker farm, and made his way straight to the hay-field. There was old David pitching enormous forkfuls of hay on to a waiting rack, and boyishly chaffing the man on top.

"Buck up, there, buck up!" old David was calling to him. "You got to hustle some now to load as fast 'as us old fellers of seventy can pitch up to you!"

The younger Griscom strode up to his father and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"I guess I've made a mistake, father," he said gently. "You can pitch hay or hill corn or paris-green the potatoes over to your own farm any time you're a mind to, an' I won't open my mouth. I'm sorry I've drove you to anything like this."

The old man's eyes rested fondly on his son. "You meant well, Sam," he said soothingly. "You done what you thought was right, but you overdone the leisure business a little mite—that was the trouble."

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A local druggist is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from our home druggists.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive kidneys, overcoming backache, bladder weakness and urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

CAUSE AND CURE OF APPENDICITIS THE SIMPLE REMEDY THAT EFFECTS THE CURE

Professor Blanchard of the French Academy of Medicine has spent a great amount of time studying that dread disease—Appendicitis. In company with Professor Metchnikoff, he has carefully examined numerous cases, and both have reached the conclusion that the cure is not the knife. In more than forty cases the symptoms of Appendicitis disappeared after the patients had been treated for worms.

There are, no doubt, many persons suffering from worms who are erroneously attributing their trouble to some other cause. A few doses of Dr. True's Elixir are sufficient in most cases for the complete expulsion of the worms. The presence of these parasites is easily recognized by the following symptoms:—Indigestion; foul tongue; offensive breath; variable appetite; hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel; heavy, dull eyes; itching of the nose; short dry cough; grinding of the teeth; starting during sleep; slow and frequent fever in children—convulsions and bed-wetting.

Dr. True's Elixir will not only expel the worms, but will build up the whole system as well.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR THE OLD FAMILY REMEDY

has been in constant use for more than half a century. Even though no worms may be present, Dr. True's Elixir prevents their growth and is an invaluable remedy for the relief of stomach ills. Its marvelous tonic qualities bring back a feeble and impaired digestion; purifies and enriches the blood; quickly regulates a disordered liver.

Dr. True's Elixir is used and endorsed by physicians and hospitals all over the country. Read what Mrs. Joy says of Dr. True's Elixir:

CENTRE ABINGTON, MASS.
DR. TRUE:—"I wish to inform you of the success I have had in using one bottle of your Elixir. I gave it to my children, and after the third dose one of them passed a long round worm. I also wish to say it is one of the safest and best medicines to have in the house for children. I would not be without it now." Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Henry C. Joy.

Dr. True's Elixir is sold by druggists everywhere at 50c, 75c, and $1.00 a bottle. An interesting and instructive booklet entitled "Children and Their Diseases" will be sent free to all who apply for it, by simply addressing Dr. J. F. True & Co., Auburn, Me. We have a special treatment for tape-worms. Send for free book.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print the remarkable prescription, in October, of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

Last Friday morning, as John Murray who lives on Riverside St., came out of his house he saw a large buck deer in his back yard, which after stopping a moment, leaped the fence and went across lots to North Street. No one having a gun handy he probably escaped to the woods.

John A. Decker of Houlton, an engineer on the Bangor & Aroostook, met with a painful accident Wednesday evening, Nov. 6. Mr. Decker's engine was coupled to the night freight and he was looking his engine over preparatory to pulling out on his run. Suddenly and without warning the water gauge glass burst. A large piece of the glass penetrated the left eyeball. He was quickly taken to his home and medical aid summoned. It is thought that the sight will be destroyed by the accident. Mr. Decker was taken to Bangor Thursday, where an eye specialist will endeavor to save the sight.

Robert O. Lovely Lost.

CAME OUT FRIDAY.

Last week a party from New Limerick started out on a hunting trip from the Nixon place in Ludlow and on Wednesday while hunting the party separated, agreeing to meet later on in the day, when darkness came on Robert O. Lovely, one of the party failed to show up and early next morning search was made for him, but he could not be found.

Word was brought out to the settlement, and a searching party started in to look for him. Friday morning twenty members of Co. L. of this town, of which Lovely is a popular member started for the section to assist in the search.

On Friday he appeared at Monticello having come across from where he went in. He spent Wednesday night out of doors, in the wind and rain, and Thursday night he stayed in an old lumber camp, where he found some deer meat, and later, on Friday he ran across a lumber crew who gave him food, and directed him to Monticello.

Potatoes.

The potato market is about the same as it has been, very little stock is being brought in and the buyers who at this time of year generally have their bins full, have very little of any stock on hand. Stock in storage is showing some signs of some rot.

The price to-day varies from 1.50 to 1.65.

Raid at the Line Store.

Scott Act Inspector Colpitts and Constable Wolverson of Woodstock arrived in town one day last week on the early train from Woodstock for the purpose of making some liquor seizures at Thompson's and McNarlin's who are selling liquor in violation of law on their territory. Sheriff Thurlough and Deputy Sheriff Ross of Portage Lake, who happened to be in town, and C. E. Dunn joined the provincial officials in the raid. Nothing was found at the Thompson's though evidence of illegal business was seen on every hand. The raid at Thompson's was not so much for the purpose of finding liquor as to serve papers on Jack Quigley for selling liquor a few days before. Jack was too quick for the inspector and before the papers could be served skipped to the American side of the line. The officials were more fortunate at McNarlin's as twenty quart bottles of Canadian whiskey were found at his place. McNarlin was tried at Woodstock before Judge Dibblee and fined fifty dollars for first offence.

Sis in New York.

There will be a chance for everybody to spend a big evening of laugh, when "Sis in New York" comes to the Heywood Opera House, on Saturday evening of this week. "Sis" herself needs no introduction and the fact that the same distinguished cast which has always been with her is coming this time, leaves only the new play to talk about. The advance notices say that it is the best chance she has ever had, and their claims do not sound extravagant when you consider what a dash the pigtailed Hoosier lassie and her following must have cut in the metropolis.

The piece is well stayed the company carrying their own special scenery showing Broadway at night a blaze of electric light, The Brooklyn Bridge etc.

The Spanish Letter Game.

As will be remembered by the Times readers, in our issue of September 18, 1907, we gave an account of a letter we had read from a man in prison in Spain, who wanted to give to the receiver of the letter Mr. G. M. Edwards, of Presque Isle, a vast amount of money if he would agree to take care of his daughter etc.

The following letter to a gentleman in Island Falls from the American Legation in Madrid explains the swindle in an authoritative manner.

The publication of this letter and exposure of the fraud may save others from being duped. As a matter of fact the people of Maine as well as elsewhere ought to be pretty thoroughly posted regarding this attempt to swindle.

The letters of inquiry are so numerous at the legation at Madrid that a circular letter has been printed to reply to these and the following is a copy of one received by Mr. York:

"American Legation, Madrid, Oct. 4, 1907.

"Mr. George W. York, Island Falls, Me.

"Dear Sir: In reply to your letter of recent date, in regard to an estate in Spain which you have been told has been left by a relative of yours, I beg to inform you that the whole matter is a swindle, and an attempt to obtain money from you by false pretences. There are on file at this legation hundreds of communications received from people in the United States to whom letters similar to the one you received have been sent. There has been in existence in this country for upwards of 30 years an apparently well organized band of swindlers, who work upon the same lines that have been used in the attempt to deceive you. You may be sure that there is no truth whatever in the statements made to you by the people on this side in this connection. If you were to continue the correspondence with these swindlers they would send you copies of court decrees, testaments, wills, etc. all tending to support their statements, but I warn you, they are forgeries.

Recently within one week one man in Iowa and another in New Hampshire have each sent $500 here to pay the expenses of the reputed daughter to America. Two other men have arrived in Madrid, having journeyed all the way from Montana, for the purpose of taking the same child to their home; and a priest in Columbus, Ohio, has informed me that members of his parish had started to mortgage their farms in order to raise money to send to these swindlers. In the past few months, victims from nearly every state of the union have written to this legation.

"As you have been saved financial loss by the information here sent you, I ask you, in return, to help save others from being swindled and to lighten my labor in the matter by correspondence in connection with it being burdensome by immediate giving to the newspapers of your locality, an account of this swindle, so that publicity may kill it. Efforts are being made to bring the parties to justice here, but the only effective remedy is a public and complete exposure of the absolutely false and fraudulent character of the entire scheme.

"I am,
"Very truly yours,
"William H. Buckler,
"Secretary of Legation."

E. M. Conference April 15, 1908.

The Methodists of Eastern Maine will be much interested to learn that Bishop John William Hamilton of San Francisco has been appointed to preside at the next session of the East Maine conference which will commence its annual session at Houlton, April 15, 1908.

This decision was reached at the meeting of the board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church which was held at Spokane, Wash. Thursday.

The news of Bishop Hamilton's coming to this conference will be very pleasing to Methodists as he is known as a "popular bishop" and is besides known in the East Maine, although he has never been here as a bishop. In former years he visited this conference in behalf of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Educational society and made many friends.

Methodists will also be interested in the announcement that the conference will be held at Houlton commencing April 15. It was especially desired that the conference should be placed at an early date as has been done in order that the delegates could go on immediately to the general conference at Baltimore. One of the interesting features of the East Maine conference will doubtless be the selection of delegates to Baltimore and it is promised that there will be a number of aspirants.

Another matter that it is probable will come up at the coming session of the East Maine will be in regard to tracing a memorial to the general conference asking for action to unite the East Maine and Maine conferences. This matter has been suggested a number of times in the past and it is understood that at the present time the majority of the members of the East Maine conference favor such a step believing that it would give Maine Methodists a much stronger standing in the general conference.

Legal Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his address or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment. If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not.

2. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them unclaimed for, is prima facie evidence of fraud. If you want to stop your paper, write to the publisher yourself, and don't leave it to the post master.

An editorial in the Fort Fairfield Review explains how a lady of that village spent $12.45 by coming to Houlton to buy a coat for herself, saving $2.00 thereby, and goes on to say how much better it would be for her to have bought at home.

We have the same thing Brother Harvey in Houlton, people going to Bangor and other places, not only for garments, but sending as far as Chicago for goods that they could buy right at home, for the same money, and sometimes less.

This will always happen, and no matter where one lives people will continue to go to the larger places with the expectation of getting gold dollars for fifty cents. Such is human nature, and what we lose by people sending away, in a measure is regained by the above incident. The same thing will doubtless happen to the people of smaller communities sending to Fort Fairfield for goods instead of trading at the smaller stores at home.

Henry Clews the well known New York Banker delivered an address a short time ago before a class in Political Economy at Yale University, saying among other things:

"The pessimist is abroad in this fair land of ours in these days, preaching the gospel of discontent and a favorite text is that the young man has no show or little chance to get on in life. Do not be misled or discouraged by such false doctrine."

"There never was a time when brains were at a greater premium than at present, nor courage, education, industry and energy more requisite or of greater demand. The harder you have to struggle to complete your education, the better you will be fitted for the battle of life. Disappointments may embarrass you but you must conquer them instead of allowing them to conquer you. Every victory thus won will be an incentive to further efforts and achievements and will provide a stepping stone to success."

These words are applicable to every one in any walk of life. How often some one complains that "luck" never was on his side, and yet luck is something a person makes for himself. There is never any work done no matter how little, but what brings its results. We may not see these results to-day, or to-morrow but they are sure to come, and some one who does not know the work that has been done to accomplish this, will say "that's luck."

The man who depends on work for success will get ahead of him who waits for luck, every time.

ONE OF SAM'S STORIES.

Ransford W. Shaw and James Archibald, two Houlton lawyers, sometimes go hunting together. On one of these trips, according to Mr. Shaw, they had a decidedly interesting experience with a rabbit.

"We went up by Mt. Chase," says Mr. Shaw, "and were looking for rabbits. We were some distance apart when Archibald shouted to me, 'Why didn't you shoot?'"

"I looked at him. Wasn't sure just which way he was going to run, so held my fire."

"At last he swung and circled down towards Archibald. I was waiting for Jim to shoot. The rabbit had his own ideas on the subject; also, I guess he had ideas concerning us."

"He made another swing. This time he came my way. Jim was waiting for me to shoot."

"There we stood. That rabbit kept circling. He went near enough to both of us to have enabled us to have shot him but we didn't."

"Just as the animal went out of sight Archibald shouted to me, 'Why didn't you shoot him?'"

"Waiting for you," said I.

"Then we both laughed and went back to camp minus our rabbit."

HYGIENIC VALUE OF COOKING.

Prof. Harvey W. Wiley, chemist-in-chief of the Department of Agriculture, believes that one of the most healthful forms of exercise for the American woman is cooking. He says:

"Cooking affords physical exercise of the most beneficial kind, bringing into play nearly all the muscles. To knead bread is a most vigorous and wholesome exercise, not surpassed by bowling or tennis; and the beating of eggs, the stirring of materials for cake and the mixing of puddings—not to mention the rolling of pie crust—are as healthful as rowing or golf."

"I am not of the opinion that all kinds of housework afford beneficial exercise."

Indeed, sweeping and dusting are liable to be injurious and the same may be said of washing, ironing and scrubbing. They are too arduous; they exercise one set of muscles at the expense of the others, and usually cause fatigue, which is always bad.

"It is different, however, with cooking, which employs all the muscles of the body without overtaxing any of them. In short, it is a first-rate exercise, inducing a uniform and harmonious development of the physique. Not only does it require the best efforts of the body, but also of the brain, for it calls upon the judgment, the perceptive faculties and the imagination, cultivating and stimulating all three."

The Sameness of it.

It's the same old story in the same old way:

Potatoes are rotting, and farming don't pay.

It's the same old hustle and the same old whirl,

And the same old cook and the same hired girl.

It's the same old road and the same old ruts,

And the same old bulldogs and the same old butts.

It's the same tax-collector with the same old tale—

"If you don't pay your taxes, you'll have to go to jail."

And the same old blacksmith shoes the same old nag,

When we pay the bill in oats he always steals the bags,

But the old blacksmith is now quiet as a lamb,

Though he's very fond of meat, he doesn't like smoked ham.

And the same old barber with the same old smile,

Duns the same old fellow in the same old style;

And the same old preacher tells the same old story—

If we don't get a wiggle on, we'll never get to glory.

It's the same old writer with the same swelled head,

So we'll drop our pen and hustle for the same old bed.

Packing Away Vitality.

If people realized how precious physical and mental vitality are, they would not squander them by foolishness any more readily than they would tap their veins and squander their life blood.

To accomplish great things we must have a strong, vigorous life force, a powerful vitality. If we do not have these, everything we do will bear the stamp of weakness. It will crop out in every act. It is the strong vitality that tells in the great struggle of life. It is the reserve power that enables the runner to keep going when others fall exhausted by the way.

It is a great art to learn to accumulate and conserve vitality, to store it away for future emergencies. It is success capital. You may succeed without money, but you cannot succeed without physical and mental capital. It is the strong vitality that wins. The plus force, the physical and mental energies themselves are the things that enable one to surmount difficulties and ride triumphantly over obstacles.

It is a very shortsighted policy to try to crowd the brain beyond its normal capacity, to force it to think when it needs rest or recreation.

Many people work so much that they do not store any reserve power. They use up all the power they generate, as they go along. All creative work, especially, requires a fresh brain, vigorous, spontaneous thought.

I have noticed that people who think they must work every minute, who are always doing something, do not accomplish nearly as much, nor produce work of as good a quality, as those who labor a great deal less, and play a great deal more. In other words, their play is a great producer, because it keeps the mind and body in splendid trim for work: it lubricates the faculties, restores balance—keeps the mind fresh, sane, and vigorous.

All effective work is a result of concentrated faculties. A tired and exhausted brain cannot focus its ideas with any power. It is not so much a question of will power as a question of vigorous mentality, and that is a child of pure blood; it depends upon a hundred other conditions being just right.

Don't Talk Hard Times.

Good times depend not only upon the great laws of supply and demand, but also upon the maintenance of public confidence. Fear and distrust are fatal enemies of confidence. The moment business men get scared and people begin to talk hard times, distrust spreads like wildfire. Level-headed men say they see no real cause for alarm, but at the same time the perpetual suggestion which is being passed along influences them, and they grow more cautious. Bankers see no breakers ahead, yet they think that they should be conservative, and they begin to call in their loans, which are not quite so gilt-edged as before. They are also more careful about accommodating their borrowing customers, so that they may be a little better prepared in case anything adverse should happen.

These precautions spread. Distrust, fear, anxiety, and a feeling of uncertainty, like the rising tide of gossip, sweep like wildfire all over the country. Soon everybody is talking hard times; all are influenced by the contagion of the perpetual fear of suggestion. Cautious men think, perhaps, they have been spreading out a little too much, and they begin to retrench, to discharge help, and to cut down salaries and expenses generally. Mercantile houses, manufactories, railroads, and other concerns stop extensions and improvements, and take in sail until all danger is past.

As a consequence public confidence is shaken, and there is a general straggling of business all over the country. Important contracts, the erection of large buildings, and extension negotiations are called off. There is a marked decline in business transactions of all kinds. Nobody has confidence to branch out; everybody is hedging.

Such a condition of things began with the recent investigation and prosecution of certain great combinations of capital. After the investigation, these great concerns began to retrench, and when the whole country caught the spirit of caution, stocks began to drop, business houses began to fail, and the first we knew there was a sort of mental business panic, a condition wholly uncalled for, unwarranted. Crop prospects were most promising and the country at large was in superb condition. The panic was mainly mental, caused by fear and anxiety resulting from lack of confidence, general distrust of the future.

There is no real condition in this country to-day to produce hard times; no warrant for them but the people's talk. When people are scared money is always tight. It was right in the midst of the most prosperous times we have ever had, that men began to whisper, "Hard times are coming." "Business has been too good to last!" "Such a boom of prosperity cannot possibly hold out."

If the entire press of the country had refused to pass along the pessimistic note, and had assured the people that there was no cause for alarm, that the panic was mainly a mental one, the public confidence would not have been shaken to any great extent.

As a matter of fact the actual condition of our great nation was never better than to-day. There are no real hard times among us, and there are not going to be any. Just as quickly as public confidence is restored everything will go on as before.

How little we realize how much the general mental attitude of business men has to do with good times and hard times! Prosperity is in the air when everybody has confidence. When there is no doubt or uncertainty in the public faith, times are good. But let the last doubt creep into the minds of a few prominent business men; let a few noted financiers prophesy that hard times are upon us; let but the mists of doubt cloud the public confidence, and everything begins to tighten up.

Business rests so largely upon confidence, that anything which disturbs it affects the market and business generally very quickly. Every little while there is a great run on a bank, which proves to be perfectly solid, just because a rumor was set afloat that it was shaky. Business houses have sometimes come to grief in a similar way. A rumor without a particle of foundation might cause a run on the Bank of England.

Unfavorable rumors spread much more rapidly than favorable ones, and they keep increasing in volume like a snowball—everybody adding a little to and embellishing what he has received. It is a strange propensity of human nature which likes to exaggerate all news—a person's or a firm's misfortune.

NOT WORTH SAYING.

"How do you manage here without a doctor within ten miles? Suppose somebody is taken ill?"

"Sure, we'd just give him a glass of whiskey, sort!"

"And if that did no good?"

"Then we'd give him another!"

"But suppose that had no result?"

"Redad, then, we'd know he wasn't worth throublin' about."

Bijou Theatre.

The Bijou Theatre, formerly Society Hall that opened last Saturday, show all the qualities of being one of the most popular amusement resorts of this town, not only are the pictures among the best ever shown here, but Miss Macdonald is an artist at the piano, and the illustrated songs by Mr. Griffin are a feature.
The quarters of the Bijou Theatre are perfect for a moving picture entertainment being large, clean, and well ventilated, as well as being centrally located.

Two machines are used to produce the pictures and there is not a moment's wait during the entire show, the pictures are absolutely clean and steady and do not bother the eyes in the least.

We predict a successful run for the Bijou.

Linneus.

Every one was surprised and shocked to learn of Clarence Johnson's sudden death, which took place on Nov. 7, at the home of his uncle Wm. Colebatch in Amity. It seems he had been ailing for sometime, but had neglected the warning pains in his right side, and when he was stricken suddenly the surgical operation was too late to save his life, and another young life is given to the dread disease appendicitis.
His father, mother and two brothers Fred and Silas survive him. He was about 23 years of age, and was a great favorite with both old and young and will be much missed.
He was a charter member of the Maccabees lodge and the lodge attended the funeral in a body and their beautiful burial services were read at the grave. Much sympathy is felt for the family in their sad bereavement, "what bright hopes may here be buried."

Several cases of tonsillitis in town.
Spaff Carr got a nice deer on Saturday, but moose and deer meat will be plenty when Henry and George return.

Our Milk Supply.

FROM THE PRODUCERS SIDE.

I have been very much interested, or rather amused as a producer, and vendor of milk, from what has been printed in your paper, in regard to the milk supply of this town. One veterinary I think called milk the most dangerous food any one could put in their stomach, and another thinks it shocking and deplorable that he could not advise visiting mothers with infants of which milk vendor they should buy their milk, and the increase of tuberculosis in hogs is caused by the practice of feeding IMPURE MILK, he did not say milk from diseased cows. Now if I have read aright 8-10 of the deceased hogs never had any milk only what they got from their mothers, but were fed on swill gathered from the city and village where the desease germs are more in evidence.
Now I think there is not a milk vendor in this town who wants his family or himself to use milk from diseased cows, of course it has been some time since I attended Sunday school regularly, but I learned a shining rule there which said to use the other fellow about as I would like to be used.

Now I think there is no special kick among the milk producers against having their cows tested, but I thought it might be interesting or at least amusing to show up some faults of the consumers and call on "City Father boards of health or the Powers that be." When things are to make it compulsory for every consumer when they empty any milk from a bottle to empty it all and rinse the bottle in cold water.
Not empty a bottle out and then leave the bottle on the kitchen window, where I have seen it till a rim milk dries on than empty a little more, and let another rim dry on, then try to wash it off with hot water and burn it on to make a microbe trap that we cannot wash off. Oh, I forgot this is a private affair the "Powers that be" cannot dictate how the consumers should handle their milk.

I have been to quite an expense to fix up my stable (other milk-men have done the same I think) to make it light with plenty of sun and ventilation with raised platforms for the cows to stand on, so that they can be kept clean and dry, the milking is done in a cleanly manner and strained through cloth strainers and the milk is put into tanks containing ice water, and in hot weather ice is broken up and put around the bottles when the cart starts for town, we try to deliver the milk to the consumers in the best possible manner, and it is up to the consumers to help us in giving proper attention to the bottles. It may be dangerous food when not properly cared for, but there is nothing that will so revive a person when tired as a drink of hot milk and the element tell us that there is more food value in a quart of milk than in a pound of the best beef steak, so let us pull together and make the milk supply of Houlton the best and purest in the county, of course if the vets. are out of a job I do not think the milk producer will stand in their way to earn a few dollars per cow for testing their herds if the consumers wants to pay for it as Dr.
Jervis says.

and Vendor.

Prize Winners.

The following taken from the Turf Farm and Home will interest many of our readers who were acquainted with Mr. Tingley when he lived in Littleton.

"Messrs. D. H. Tingley & Son
write us that they have just returned from a tour through Vermont, where they exhibited their herd at three of the Green Mountain State's great fairs, St. Johnsbury, Middlebury, and the new State fair at White River Junction. Naturally they met some of the crack fairs of Hartford of New Hampshire, but were not obliged to lower their colors, not in a single instance. They won 51 prizes and 22 of them were first in which they took the blue. In fact they took the blue every time they showed for it. They captured the herd prize from a New Hampshire breeder who had 20 head, while they only had 12, and at the State Fair at White River Junction
there were five herds represented.
Mr. Tingley is very enthusiastic over the courteous treatment accorded him by Master of Transportation Fred Sanborn of the Maine Central, who made it possible for him to make very close connections both going and coming. He is also very enthusiastic over the very courteous treatment accorded him at all the fairs, especially at St.

Johnsbury, where the visitors were particularly enthusiastic over the fair Maine Herd, as they called them. Then he had the satisfaction of demonstrating to them the Herd's could win, as he competed in all the fat cow classes, and Ingleside 24 won every first prize against all breeds as she did in Maine."

Tolman's letter was addressed to Rev. Wm. P. McKenzie of the Christian Science Publishing Society, and is as follows:—

PARIS, L'OCTOBRE 28, 1907.

DEAR DR. MCKENZIE:—
It gives me sincere pleasure to inform you that, on my recommendation, the highest award, a Grand Prize, was made your exhibit by the International Jury at this Exposition.

A Diploma of Honor was awarded Mrs. Eddy as the Founder of Christian Science.

Very sincerely yours,

W. H. TOLMAN,

Commissioner American Section.

The exhibit spoken of in Dr. Tolman's letter was made up largely to Mrs. Eddy's writings.

of January, A. D. 1907, at the office of Harry M. Briggs, in Houlton, in said County, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, all the right, title, and interest which the said William H. Boynton had on the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906, being the time when the same was attached on the original writ in the action wherein the judgment was rendered upon which said execution issued, in and to the following described real estate; A certain parcel of land situated in said Sherman, described as follows:
Part of the north half of Lot number two, in said Sheeman, bounded northerly by land of James Kennedy and land of the inhabitants of Sherman, easterly by the Aroostook road, southerly by land of Sarah Perry, westerly by the Stacyville Town line, land of George F.
Mahone, Henry Morro, containing (50) fifty acres more or less, and being part of land devised said William H. Boynton by Sarah Boynton.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Lime in the Dairy Room.

We are all pretty familiar with the purifying effect of a liberal use of lime on the interiors of stables, of dairy buildings and such places. I found in Denmark that this sort of thing is practiced to a much greater extent than we have ever thought of doing in this country. It may be news to many buttermakers to know that a great many of the cream vats used in some of the best Danish creameries today are simply large wooden tubs. You can understand that unless they took extra precautions, these tubs would not be in good condition. I was not able to see that any injury resulted to the cream from the use of these wooden vessels for ripening vats. The secret is that they are kept perfectly clean and sweet by a liberal use of lime. Every utensil is immersed in a strong solution of lime every few days, and some of them every day. All the wooden machinery, such as churns, butter workers, etc., are coated with a thick lime wash almost every day. This coating is left on for a short time and before it quite hardens it is washed off. It is surprising how that helps to sweeten the wood and causes it to dry much more readily. The same thing is applied to the floors. If they get a little greasy a liberal use of white-wash cleans them very easily and very perfectly. There is nothing that would be of more use to the cheese and buttermakers who desire to have a clean, wholesome factory, than a liberal use of lime water. It saves a great deal of labor, is cheap, and is a good disinfectant as well. I would recommend the use of lime in that way, not only to the farmers for the purifying of their stables, etc., but also the butter and cheesemakers who wish to keep their factories clean and their utensils in proper condition.—Dairy Commissioner J. A. Buddick, Ottawa.

Winter is Coming.

It is hard to realize that the summer is ended, but unless we do realize it and accordingly make prompt and practical preparation for winter the cold weather will find us unprepared and cause much trouble and annoyance if not positive loss.

Call out the fowls very closely now because cold weather will make house room very valuable and the good hens should not have their right infringed upon by unprofitable members. Hens more than three years old will scarcely lay enough eggs this winter to make their retention profitable. Dispose of all surplus male birds whether old or young. Don't carry any more through the winter than you will have to have for use as breeders.

If any window lights get broken out during the summer, replace them at once patch up the flaws in the roof, look out for knot holes in the walls of the building and see that there are no cracks or holes anywhere in the house through which the cold wind and other elements such as snow and rain can blow, causing drafts, colds and perhaps an epidemic of roup.

Horse and Stable Hints.

If your horse is out of condition, do you know why?

If the feed and care are what they should be, then look at his teeth. See that the grinders come together evenly, and smooth off the sharp points.

Half the pleasure of a country life lies in the ownership of a good horse. Every farmer should have a horse that the wife and daughter can ride and drive, as well as the boys.

In selecting such a horse, choose one about fifteen hands and one or two inches high, weighing about 950 to 1,000 pounds.

He should have a good even disposition and go equally well in harness or under saddle.

Of all the fools who drive horses the ones who rush a horse down hill are the worst.

It weakens the tendons and nerves, jars the shoulders and springs the knees.

As the cool nights come on be careful about putting your horses in the stable when heated from over work or driving.

Give them a good rubbing all over with a towel or cloth, and put on a light woolen blanket. If the blanket becomes damp, put on a dry one for the night.

It is still better to rub the horse until he is dry. It does not take long, and it pays, though few farmers will do it.

It takes much patience to teach a horse seven or eight years old to do new kinds of work. But let patience have her perfect work; the horse is not so much to blame after all.—"Farm Journal."

Poultry Pickings.

When your hens appear droopy in cold weather, look for the large gray louse on the head and neck. Melted lard applied in small quantities is a good remedy.

Keep a good jar of vaseline among your emergency remedies for the winter. It is of value applied to the frosted comb and wattles of a bird, drawing the frost out thoroughly.

A cheap remedy for mites, and one most farmers have at hand, is vinegar. Put it on with a sprayer. Two quarts in a ten-quart pailful of water will help a lot in ridding the premises of these pests.

Keep the eggs stored in a clean room till ready to take them to market. Egg shells are porous and it is known that they will absorb odors. The absorption may not be sufficient to make the eggs taste, but it will be enough to start the eggs to spoiling.

More birds die from overfeeding and eating sour feeds than from any other causes combined. Make them work for what they get, just as you have to do. On the other hand, do not be so careless that you will permit them to eat sour feed. If the wet mashes can not be kept sweet, feed the material dry.

The Independent Farmer.

BY GOVERNOR CHAS. E. HUGHES, OF NEW YORK.

When you get out where a man has a little elbow room and a place to develop, he has thoughts of his own. His thinking is not supplied to him every night and every morning, and he is less of a machine and more of a man, so that I do not think that the farmers need to be looked upon, or want to be looked upon, as dependents of the state. They do not come to the state government asking alms. They are self-reliant, they are intelligent. What we want in connection with agriculture is what we want in connection with every other field of noble effort. We want training, we want intelligence, we want scientific method, we want direction, we want the way shown, and then the man can walk in it. There is no reason why the same care and intention and skill and scientific consideration should not be devoted to agriculture as to industry and the technical trades. The men who are running away from the farms too frequently make a mistake, and some day in New York—and the day is rapidly approaching—our young men, in large numbers, will wake up to the fact that they have a pretty good chance on the farm, and that they may be to a greater degree independent and happy in life if they stay where their happy lots were cast in connection with their fathers' farm or another which they may be able to procure.

Watch the Driving Harness and Tackle.

In these days of danger on the highways, it is of the utmost importance that every provision to insure the greatest degree of safety should be made use of. On this subject the following, from a circular of a prominent life insurance company, will be read with interest, and with profit also, it is hoped:

"Trying to make the old harness last a little longer leads to one out of every four runaways. In other words, two hundred and fifty mishaps out of one thousand are caused by breaking or coming apart of the rigging. It has been often said that few persons who drive know when a horse is properly harnessed, and fewer still give due attention to the soundness and correct adjustment of the tackle. This statement is borne out by the records, which show that 62 runaways out of 1000 are caused by traces becoming detached, 97 by broken reins, 65 by broken or badly adjusted breeching, 26 by broken bits or bridles and 10 by broken girths. In rare instances there are hidden defects in harness which cannot be detected, but it is safe to say that careful examination of the parts and their adjustment on the horse would prevent 90 per cent of the accidents caused by broken harnesses and improper harnessing.

Wornout and defective vehicles cause almost as many accidents as imperfect harness, showing incidentally the wisdom of buying a carriage of reliable make in the first instance, and then keeping it in good repair. To wheels running off the axles, 82 runaways out of 1000 are due. Such mishaps will seldom happen if due care is given to seeing that the nuts are tight, since the turning of the wheels tends to keep the nuts on and not to screw them off. Broken axles caused 6 accidents; broken kingbolts 12; broken shafts 21; and broken whiffletrees 34; all the breaks together thus falling short of the number of carelessly attached wheels.

Of the objects which frighten horses, automobiles easily hold first place. These and the motor cycles are indirectly responsible for about as many runaways as all other objects together, and it may be added that it is the reckless operation of the motor vehicles rather than the vehicles themselves which frightens most of the horses. Automobiles cause 130 runaways out of 1000, and motor cycles cause the 48 more."

When corn is fed to pigs it will bring nearly twice as much as when sold by the bushel. Nothing should be sold off the farm that can be turned into something more valuable, or which can be marketed in a more concentrated form. It is transportation charges that largely reduce the profit.

Meeting the lecturer the next day, an old man said: "It's no good, mister."

"What isn't?" asked the lecturer.

"Well," said the man, "when I went home after the lecturer last night and kissed my wife, she said, 'What's gone wrong with you, you old idiot?'"

Bacteria in the Manure Heap.

The most valuable fertilizer that can be used on most lands is now generally recognized to be manure. The reasons for this are varied, says Country Gentleman. For our purpose we only need notice that its value consists in the fact, first, that it furnishes food for the subsequent generation of crops, and, second, that it furnishes the soil with large quantities of active bacteria whose utility we have already discovered. The material in a manure heap, however, is only of value for crops after it has undergone a variety of changes, due to the action of the micro-organisms. These changes are very profound, and totally modify the nature of the material. A knowledge of them will enable a farmer to control them better and to handle intelligently this very valuable material.

To understand what is going on in a manure heap, we must ask first what materials it contains. It contains great quantities of undigested food which comprise a large series of different bodies: it contains also large quantities of hay and straw; it holds sugars and fats and starches, and may contain, indeed, any vegetable or animal product. The most valuable part of it, however, is the liquid manure from animals, which is too frequently allowed by the farmer to run to waste as not worth saving. This material is really the most valuable part of the whole, for it is found that it contains about two-thirds of the nitrogen, and four-fifths of the potash of the manure heap; and inasmuch as these are the most important foods for plants, it is clear that this liquid manure is more valuable than all the rest. The value of the liquid manure has been strongly emphasized in recent years, so that most farmers today understand it; yet many, still ignorant of the facts, allow this material to leach into the ground, to soak away quite out of reach, and never take any pains to retain it for the use of their crops.

None of the materials mentioned above is in condition for plant use. They are all too highly complex. They are all the products of plant or animal life, rather than materials on which plants can feed. Before they can be of any value, therefore, they must undergo the general type of changes that we have referred to in a previous paper. Hence green manure is of no immediate value to the crops, and it is only after it is fermented that it becomes of practical utility.

The fermentations that go on in the manure heap are of two types. The first of these produces a chemical destruction, by which these highly complex products of animal and plant life are broken to pieces and brought down into much simpler forms, toward a condition in which they can be used again by plants. The inevitable result of such a pulling to pieces is a loss of material. As we have already noticed, the decomposition processes give rise to large quantities of gases, and many of these gases pass from the manure heap and enter the atmosphere, when they are of course quite lost. It is impossible totally to prevent such losses, but it is to the farmer's interest to reduce them as much as he can.

TOO MUCH OF A SURPRISE.

During a speech on "Marriage and After," the lecturer said that old married men should kiss their wives as they did when they were a year or two married.

Meeting the lecturer the next day, an old man said: "It's no good, mister."

"What isn't?" asked the lecturer.

That the value of the Personal Estate is nothing
That the Personal Estate is therefore insufficient to pay the debts of the deceased, and expenses of sale and of administration, and it is necessary for that purpose to sell some part of the real estate to raise the sum of $644.80
That the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion thereof.
Wherefore your petitioner prays that he may be licensed to sell and convey the whole of the interest of said Annie Moore in said Real Estate at public sale for the payment of said debts, and expenses of sale and of administration.
Dated at Houlton the 15th day of October, A. D. 1907.

CHARLES A. MOORE, Admr.

Notice.

Mrs. Hortense Powers Kinsman while visiting at my house on Court Street lost an umbrella with a small ivory handle, which handle has a peculiar value to her. I think some one took it by mistake or found it and after reading this will return it, if so they will be suitably rewarded.
